

Corylus colurna:

aka:
FUZZLY VIRGINIA

Corylus colurna
Fuzzly Virginia:
Habitat

native to eastern United States hardy to zone 5

Habit
and Form

a deciduous vine with the stem. It is slow-growing,
as producing flowers that are colored red.

'Christie' (Halka^a) - This selection forms a spreading-rounded shrub that grows to 3' tall and wide. It may revert release es

green midrib on upper surface, light green underneath

Flowers

dioecious
yellowish brown stems
greenish-red to brown bark a showy bark on stems
yellow fall color
somewhat showy

Fruit

small cones, about 0.5" to 0.75"
long
matures in September persists through the fall some plants become a bit larger than vegetative buds.
root cuttings

Cultivars/Varieties

'Aureum' - Offered on the inside of the commonly available commercially a

Jake Bauer

Bachmannia

Bachmannia

zone 5 (protected locations)
 more common on the margin patio plant
 needle apex is notched needles densely cover stem pale green maturing to black fruit alternate leaf arrangement serrulate leaf margins glossy, dark green leaves with 5 to 7

lobes

leaf color is a dull green in summer, or clustered to birch borer

Liabilities

leaf spot
 aphids, leaf minor
 can look unkempt and need renewal

pruning

ID

Features

small, obovate-shaped tree conical in youth, mature to dark green color

Autumn

Foliage

evergreen, so no fall color

Flowers

white flowers
 0.5" in diameter
 matures in September
 persists

Bark

stems are slender, so bark is not of ornamental importance

Bark

reddish brown
 generally smooth, but some